Scholarly articles look quite different from popular articles found in magazines or newspapers.

This handout provides you with two examples of how the first page of a scholarly article typically looks, and where you can find information needed to cite the article accurately.

Typical layout 1

Abstract: Brief, comprehensive summary of the article. Use to determine if article is relevant to your topic.
Abstract: Brief, comprehensive summary. Use to determine if the article is relevant to you.